

It is nearly the end of the school year – and the end of my time as Headteacher at Braddan School. There have been a lot of changes in the 15 years I have been here, but the thing that has remained the same is the care and dedication that all staff show to the children. It was lovely to see the overwhelmingly positive responses to our recent questionnaire, with lots of constructive feedback for Mr Chapple to think about too.

I've realised that no matter what you do, as the old saying goes, 'You can't please all of the people all of the time' – but I have certainly tried my best to ensure the best provision for the children in my care. The most important thing I would wish for those children is that they be kind to each other, and show respect and understanding for others.
